

SOME GEMS FOR Cancer TREATMENT

By Marilyn Freedman, Homeopath

October 30th 2011

Over the last few weeks I have heard about a number of people that I knew who had died from cancer. Most of them were my contemporaries. It unnerved me because it seems like an epidemic. According to the World Health Organization cancer is now the leading cause of death worldwide.<sup>1</sup> So, with all the money being fundraised and/or allocated to conventional research to find a cure - does anyone dare to ask - what is wrong with this picture?

My mother died of cancer over 45 years ago. I remember her charred body from the burns of radiation treatment, the huge scar from the double mastectomy, and the lymphadema in her left arm. Most of all I remember her pain, and her delirium in the last days. Her cancer started in her right breast shortly after we were in a bus accident and she was struck in that breast. Although she was taken to hospital by ambulance and later released with "just" bumps and bruises there was no connection made to the etiology of the cancer when she was diagnosed a couple of years later. The only option given to her was a mastectomy. When the cancer spread to her other breast it too was removed. It seems to me that not much has changed for cancer patients since then.

Here is a fact that conventional medicine does not acknowledge: Cancer can develop where there has been physical trauma. The public is just now being made aware that disease follows trauma by the news media in cases where celebrities have succumbed to their injuries such as the fighter, Mohammed Ali, who suffers from Parkinson's as a result of repeated head trauma, and the more than 20 former N.F.L. players that have been posthumously found to have had chronic traumatic encephalopathy, a degenerative disease caused by blunt trauma to the head.<sup>2</sup> This is a fact that I am sharing with you: In our homeopathic medical books we have specific medicines that are used in cases where cancer has developed at a site of a physical trauma. Actually, homeopathic philosophy has always acknowledged that disease emanates from all trauma, whether it is a physical, mental or emotional trauma. That is why you will hear “We treat the cause, the root of the disease, not just the symptoms.”

In countries like India where homeopathy is sanctioned by the government and medical students decide in their last year to specialize in homeopathic, or conventional medicine, patients choose to go to either. Homeopathy has been very popular in India particularly because the medicine is very affordable and effective in a country which has such a huge population in poverty. Unlike here in North America, or Britain, in India homeopathic “cures” are a matter of fact, and there are no more restraints on the homeopaths than on the conventional doctors. In a recent seminar with the Drs. Banerji, third and fourth generation homeopathic doctors in Kalkutta, we were told that because India’s economy is strengthening and the country is becoming more prosperous people are being lured into spending money on conventional medicine which was previously prohibitively expensive. The sad price of advancement in a world where big Pharma rules....but I digress.

I took some of the homeopathic books that deal with cancer off my bookshelf to have a reread and relearned some gems that I want to share with you. One of the books was written by Eli G. Jones, 1850-1933. His observation about cancer makes a lot of sense, even today.

Although he wrote almost 100 years ago, Jones’ observations are, I feel, still relevant. Here is a snippet of his views on the increase of cancer<sup>3</sup>:

There is a rapid increase in cancer throughout the world where we see the following:

Worry. Worry weakens the nervous system. In countries where we see insanity on the increase cancer is a close second.

Vaccination. Enforced vaccination will find increased cancer.

Meat eating. Meat eating is a prolific cause of cancer. Excessive meat eating is another cause of cancer.

Tea and coffee. Tea and coffee weakens the coats of the stomach and nervous system and produces various disorders in the human system. In all countries where there is tea and coffee drinking in excess cancer is on the increase.

Alcoholic stimulants. Where there is excessive use there is an increase of cancer. Alcohol heats the blood and acts the same on cancer as kerosene on fire.

Eli G. Jones treated cancer patients for over 40 years. He tells us that “everything that weakens the vitality: war, financial crisis, worries, severe strain on the nerves, lowers the nerve power and the vitality of the person. This makes the person a good candidate for cancer, pneumonia, tuberculosis, and other life threatening diseases.”

Freedom from stress. In other words, stress weakens the nervous system, and the immune system, which makes us susceptible to illness. Jones’ tells us that these are the things to depend on for a cure: “raise the nerve power, the vitality of the person to as normal as possible”. The patients mind has to be at rest.

Unfortunately, just as Jones tells us, my limited clinical experience with cancer patients has been that they do not necessarily have the support of their families for their choice of treatment when they opt out of conventional standards in North America. The spouses can be outwardly oppositional or passive-aggressive in their undermining of natural treatment. “Cancer” is like a death sentence to the patient and when the spouse decides that it is only a matter of time, money and alternative treatment becomes a waste, in expense and of time. It is impossible to treat someone who does not have complete support around them.

Jones' understanding of cancer, very much in tune with others in his day, was that cancer is just a local manifestation of a blood disease. He tells us that before looking at the cancer the patient must first have good digestion, because good digestion makes good blood. I quite like how he put it - unlike the convoluted way that natural practitioners have of explaining the intricacies of particular vitamins and supplements and the biochemical, physiological pathways in mumbo jumbo that makes my eyes roll up into the back of my head. What you put in your mouth, and how you digest it, or not, makes for the state of health of your blood. Our life blood determines the state of health of our system, from the cellular to the tissular, all encompassing. Simple and understandable.

“Cancer patients have weakened vitality and enfeebled nerve power and this is the key to the situation that tells us how to combat the disease.” Eli Jones

Nutrition. The first thing to address is nutrition. The patient has to have wholesome, organic if possible, and unprocessed foods made without any preservatives or additives. Your diet should be mostly vegetables and fruit. Food should be eaten in it's raw state as much as possible. Eating this way provides us with the best fuel for our bodies to digest. What it takes to do this is a lot of work. You have to read all the labels on every package. You have to work your way through the outside aisles of the supermarket and stay away from the inside aisles for the most part. You have to know if the fish or the meat you are buying are free from antibiotics, steroids, and preservatives.

Digestion. The second thing to address is the the way in which the system digests the food we feed it. People are typically surprised when I tell them that healthy elimination is one “meal in” and one “meal out”. So, if you eat 3 meals a day you should be having 3 bowel movements a day. Any drain on the system, whether it is diarrhea, constipation, menorrhagia, hemorrhoids, etc, weakens the system and lessens the chance for recovery. This has to be attended to first because the patients general health has to be improved before the cancer can begin to improve.

Medicine. Any medicine which lowers the vitality of the patient lessens the chance of recovery. Medical treatment which is toxic to healthy cells will weaken a person's vitality. Conventional treatment has now started to explore ways around toxicity through the targeting of cancerous cells while leaving normal cells alone by way of nano medicine. The problem is that they are relying on nano technology and this is very expensive. The cost of treatment for some cancers runs in the thousands per month. The cost for some cancer medicines are simply prohibitive.

Homeopathic treatment is about strengthening the patient's immune system so that the body can rebound from the illness without damaging effects, or side effects of any kind. Nano medicine is the realm of homeopathy, and it is extremely cheap. That is why homeopathy and its practitioners are being targeted and prosecuted. That is why there are programs to discredit us. Cheap and effective treatment is a threat to that which is neither.

A medicated bath One pound of Epson salts in the bath water. Bathe at bedtime. In the treatment of cancer bathe twice a week. The blood needs magnesium which is in Epson salts. The magnesium neutralizes toxins, soothes tired nerves and makes for a good rest. It is useful for all chronic disease except for skin disease. For skin disease use sulfate of soda (natrum sulphuricum) in the same way.

Rest from worry, good food, good elimination, and a therapeutic bath is a good recipe for recovery from any ailment, any time.
